Cynthia brings significant and deep governmental experience and expertise to her position as a founding partner of Shenker Russo & Clark LLP, having dedicated her entire professional career to New York legislative and regulatory affairs. Because of her intimate knowledge of legislative and regulatory processes, she has a unique edge in helping clients successfully achieve their government-related goals, navigate the legislative system and resolve their legal issues.

She began her career working for nearly two decades in the New York State Legislature, serving as counsel to three assembly majority leaders. Cindy then joined Wilson, Elser, Moskowitz, Edelman & Dicker, where she was a founding member of the firm's Albany, New York Government Relations practice.

For over 20 years, Cindy has been deeply involved in all aspects of Government Relations. Representing clients from the largest Fortune 500 companies to the smallest not-for-profits, she went on to grow her government affairs practice dramatically to encompass a range of industries and issues, from health care and automobile dealers, to telecommunication and insurance companies, to public entities and not-for-profits.

Cindy insists on building long-term relationships with each of her clients, enabling her to match them with the resources that can best meet their needs. Add to that her doggedness, impeccable reputation and shrewd negotiating skills, and it's no wonder so many state and national associations as well as Fortune 500 companies have turned to Cindy to help them achieve their funding and business goals, and have remained clients for many years.

Whether a client is a large company or a small for profit or not for profit, they receive the same unwavering commitment to superior service from Cindy as she mobilizes her exceptional legal acumen, intimate grasp of the legislative process, close relationships with key policymakers, and access to a wealth of resources to address their issues.
